

ABSTRACT

A fastener for repairing tissue or for attaching generally fibrous matter to tissue comprising a shaft comprising a curved, tapered proximal end configured to arrest the movement of the fastener in the distal direction, and a distal portion having protrusions for allowing movement in the distal direction and arresting movement in the proximal direction.